MADISON, WI – College students have more important things to worry about than cleaning their rooms, and without Mom around supervising the mess, things can get a little cluttered. The staff at theClassConnection.com understands the cleansing woes of the average college student and wants to do its part to help beautify the dorm rooms of America. The web site's newest promotion offers the keepers of the nation's dirtiest rooms a reward for putting their studies above everything else.

TheClassConnection.com is rewarding the student who submits pictures of the dirtiest room by supplying monthly maid service for an entire semester. Submitted pictures will be posted directly to the site's blog.

"We want candidates who aren't afraid to get down and dirty but will also be creative with their clutter," said Dave Sargent, Chief Marketing Officer for theClassConnection.com. "TheClassConnection.com will offer maid service beginning January 15th to the candidate who's submission most reflects these criteria."

Candidates must have an account with theClassConnection.com and should send pictures of the room with the submitter's name, school, email address, and phone number to info@theconnection.com. Submissions should be made by December 15th.
